SIX WEEKS IN UNIFORM: BEING THE RECORD OF A TERM IN THE Military Service Of The United States IN THE GETTYSBURG CAMPAIGN OF 1863. SIX WEEKS IN UNIFORM.1 My only reason for writing the following narration of the events which transpired, relating particularly to myself, during a short term of military service, is that the scenes and occurrences may be described while they are still fresh in my memory, and the impression of them vivid and distinct. It must have been noticed in the experience of every one, that however deep and strong may be the marks which particular circumstances have made upon our feelings, time will gradually erase one point after another, wear off the edges, and render the whole dim and uncertain. I have therefore determined to write truthfully, minutely, and as clearly as possible, whatever occurred within my own observation daring that time, thinking that in future years it may be a satisfaction to me to read what has here been transcribed.--Philadelphia, November 22d, 1863. For several days previous to June 16th, 1863, there had been considerable excitement in reference to a raid, which it was said, the rebels were about to make into Pennsylvania, and there were even rumors flying about that there was a large force of them already in the southern portion of the State, and that Greencastle had been burned. Gov. Ourtin, evidently alarmed, had issued a proclamation calling upon the people to rally to the...
