Margaret overdressed, is sitting reading a magazine. She looks up impatiently and throws it down in disgust.) Margaret - (crossly.) There s no use in my trying to read or do anything else when I m so provoked. I don t see why dad can t (the bell rings) Oh, drat that bell! I don t want to see any person. I wish people would stay at home. (Goes and looks out.) Oh! it s Helen! I wonder what she wants now. She is always running over and I m sure I m never over there any more than four times a day at the most. (Helen comes in and Margaret rushes to embrace her.) Oh Helen, you dear girl! I m so glad to see you. I was just wishing you would come over. Do take off your hat and stay awhile. I ve just been so mad I could boil over or bite somebody or do something...
