CHAPTER XI TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS OF ART WORK, 1870-97 In this chapter I propose to review briefly the work of twenty-seven years of constant labour, henceforth undisturbed by political struggles, in which our artist produced a whole series of works which complete his artistic personality and fixed his style. Doubtless the most important part of an artists life are just those quiet years during which the work which survives the creative hand and brain, is produced; work, however, which must be seen to be appreciated, and to which no descriptions can do justice. On first arriving in Rome, the Costas settled in rooms in the Via Mario de Fiori, afterwards moving, when their furniture and belongings arrived from Florence, into an apartment in the Piazza di Spagna, though Nino still kept his studio at the old address in the Via Margutta. The summers of 1873-74 he spent at Porto d'Anzio, then still a lovely wild spot, reached by carriage through thick woods, and here he painted a great deal, completing for Mrs. Percy Wyndham the large picture of Women stealing Wood on the Sea-shore at Ardea, of which I have already spoken amongst the works begun in the fifties, and which was exhibited at the first Grosvenor Exhibition in 1877. In 1874 his first child was born, a daughter, whom he named Georgia, in memory of his great friend and brother in art, George Mason, whose premature death the previous year had been a great grief...
